

THERAPEUTIC GARDEN

In therapeutic gardens, patients can find small gestures, textures, smells that bring back memories. It is also a moment of sharing, of exchange, of communication.

The primary objective of this therapy is to stimulate cognitive functions in all directions to limit the progression of the pathology.

However, the patients do not only do gardening: the therapists set up complementary and fun exercises to stimulate them according to personalized objectives.